

WE WERE DOING EQ BEFORE IT WAS COOL.

We decided to start talking about it.

THE HOGAN EQ REPORT

EQ = EMOTIONAL INTELLIGENCE

(being hip to your own and others' emotions)

LET'S GET IT
STRAIGHT

It's EQ – not IQ – that matters in business.

As a leader in personality assessment, we've been studying this stuff for decades (really, ask us anything). We know cognitive ability is only a partial predictor of career success. In most jobs, it's EQ, the ability to identify and manage your own and others' emotions, that really matters. People skills determine success, and individuals who lack the ability to build effective relationships are destined to fail – no matter how smart or talented they are.

The Hogan EQ Report provides organizations with a scientifically validated tool to measure emotional intelligence. Based on the Hogan Personality Inventory and Hogan Development Survey, the easy-to-understand report provides an overall EQ score, as well as scores and feedback for six emotional competencies.

Awareness

The degree to which a person seems in touch with his or her own emotions

Detection

The degree to which a person seems aware of others' emotions and thoughts

Regulation

The degree to which a person seems able to maintain positive emotional states

Influence

The degree to which a person seems able to intentionally affect others' moods, thoughts, and behaviors

Expression

The degree to which a person seems able to effectively communicate desired emotional states to others

Empathy

The degree to which a person seems able to feel what others are feeling

"Hello EQ, meet big data"

At Hogan, we've been studying personality and occupational performance for more than 25 years. So when it comes to predicting an individual's ability to build and maintain relationships, you could call us experts.

Our research team uses terms like algorithms and competency models to explain the report. Thankfully, we've summarized it for you: it's based on science and it works.
